In the Brooklyn neighborhood of Dyker Heights, a suburban area known historically as a serene Italian-American community, an incredible holiday tradition has thrived since 1986. It all began when Lucy Spata relocated to the area. Her extravagant Christmas adornments, initially a heartfelt tribute to her mother who shared her passion for holiday decorations, sparked a trend among her neighbors. Now recognized locally as "Mrs. Claus," Lucy's initiative has turned Dyker Heights into a festive spectacle that draws in around 150,000 visitors each holiday season. Residents of Dyker Heights take the concept of Christmas décor to an entirely new level. Homes are adorned with an array of lights, toy soldiers, Santa Clauses, and even motorized Christmas exhibits. To witness this spectacular holiday scene effortlessly and enjoyably, consider joining the Dyker Heights Christmas lights tour.
